Fulton Presents in South Dakota

Dr. Robert Fulton, Regents Professor and McCasland Endowed Chair for Food Animal Research, was an invited speaker recently at the South Dakota Veterinary Medical Association meeting. He presented "Bovine Coronaviruses, Bovine Viral Diarrhea, and Bovine Herpesvirus-1 Infections in Cattle" in Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

Getting to Know You

Getting to Know You

Clinton Jones, PhD, is the Sitlington Endowed Chair in Infectious Diseases and a professor in the Department of Veterinary Pathobiology. Originally from Plainville, Kansas, he earned a BA degree from Bethany College in Lindsborg, Kansas, and a PhD in Microbiology from the University of Kansas. His current research focuses on two viruses that belong to the cx-herpesvirinae subfamily--Bovine Herpes Virus 1 and Herpes Simplex Virus Type 1.

Clinton is the father of four children and in his spare time he enjoys watching sports, fishing and working out.

Cowboys in Every County

The Oklahoma Oral History Research Program (part of the OSU Library) is conducting interviews with OSU alumni. The goal is to interview alumni from each Oklahoma county. The project coincides with OSU's 125th anniversary. View the promotion video here.

We know we have OSU Cowboy veterinarians across Oklahoma. Many counties still need nominations. Let's make sure the CVHS is well represented in the 125th year celebration of OSU. Access the nomination form right here - it's that easy.

Rebecca Tims, DVM, is a small animal internal medicine resident. Originally from Midland, Texas, she earned her DVM degree from Oklahoma State in 2014. Her research interests focus on infectious diseases, endocrine disorders and neurologic disease.

In her spare time Rebecca enjoys spending time with family and friends, hiking with her two dogs, Tucker and Lola, fishing, camping and reading.
